

Since the first phase of the Orange County Convention Center’s West Building opened in 1983, the Center has welcomed more than 15 million visitors. Over the last two decades, this building has gone through several expansions in order to accommodate the growing demands for conventions and tradeshow, yet it has always retained both the flavor and functionality of the original architecture and design. Today, this tech-marvel, designed to handle both mega shows and smaller events, offers every convenience you would expect from a world-class facility, including 1.1 million square feet of contiguous exhibition space, 49 meeting rooms, 141 breakouts, the 2,643-seat Chapin Theater, a 160-seat lecture hall and wireless mobility throughout the facility. A focal point of the West Building is the beautifully appointed Valencia Room, a 62,182 square foot multi-purpose dining and general session venue that can hold up to 6,000 people at one time. The facility’s half mile of loading dock space, the largest in the country, is strategically located on one level.
